

Dear Charles H.,

The gloriously long days of Summer are here and ready for sculpting -- and all the recreational and leisurely opportunities the San Francisco Bay Area offers.

This, the June newsletter is arriving late because of delays in getting the final tally for our ballot. In this issue you'll find a summary of our June 8 meeting in San Francisco, results of our recent ballot, reminder of our upcoming TechShop visit, and more. Enjoy!

REPORT: June meeting of Pacific Rim Sculptors

About a dozen people attended the meeting at 1890 Bryant Studio in San Francisco (thank you, Trish Tunney & colleagues for lending your space).

After introductions, pizza and beverages, the group discussed developments in our website (including a planned history section), reconstitution of our exhibitions committee, and plans for a 2014 show at the Richmond Art Center.

We then focused on the proposal of becoming a chapter of the International Sculpture Center. The potential benefits include access to local and international mailing lists, help with fundraising, professional training, participation in panels and conferences, plus presence in the ISC website and coverage in Sculpture magazine. The challenges include increased dues (to

PRSG and ISC

As PRSG members discussed the option of becoming a chapter of the ISC there were lively discussions in meetings and in email.

Some were concerned that being an ISC chapter would diminish the autonomy of Pacific Rim Sculptors group; others saw it as way to make our group stronger and more professional.

Some questioned whether the cost of adding ISC dues was worthwhile; others thought the added benefits are well worth it.

Some expressed worries about what it might entail to become a non-profit; others described benefits observed in their prior experiences with non-profits.

Some thought we would never find enough people to fill the required board of directors or offices; others have stepped forward and expressed interest in the developing this future.

include ISC membership), and requirements of becoming a formal non-profit (setting up a board of directors, regular financial reports). Those attending thought the benefits outweighed the drawbacks.

Lastly, we had a great time reviewing images submitted by six members (Gene Erickson, Jann Nunn, Susan Peterson, Barbara Stevens Strauss, Charles Stinson, Michael Walsh). The breadth of work was impressive, and in the Q&A discussion many members discovered useful resource connections with each other. All in all, a very successful and fun meeting!

Pacific Rim + International Sculpture Center

Members were recently asked to vote on a proposal for our group to become a chapter of the International Sculpture Center (ISC). The voting has concluded: The proposal passed by a large majority. Next we'll begin the process of applying for 501(c)3 non-profit status and working with the ISC to become its next chapter. More news to follow!

All in all it has been gratifying to see serious and lively discussion of our future with an intention to promote sculpture in the Bay Area.

Again, this will take work, but it should be achievable if we work together. If you have interest and skills in not-for-profit organizational development, in leadership, in policy development, in finance, and similar areas, contact us to help out!

Sculpture by the Sea is a major public event featuring large-scale art installed along stunning cliffs above the Pacific Ocean in Sydney.

installed along stunning cliffs above the Pacific Ocean in Sydney, Australia. It is now in its 17th year. Over 17 days, more than 500,000 people walk the 2-kilometer path from Bondi Beach to Tamarama Beach. These pieces represent work from more than 50 sculptors from Australia and around the world. In 2012 an American, Peter Lundberg, won the $70,000 acquisition prize. Visitors can also view small pieces indoors at the Sculpture Inside venue.

As Sculpture by the Sea 2012 was starting, host Joe Bologna spoke with David Handley, this event's founder and director, to hear just how he created this world-famous outdoor display and how he keeps it running. They discuss providing shipping cost stipends to sculptors, organizing curating panels, and the challenges of installing sculpture in this venue. Handley also oversees another yearly Sculpture by the Sea in Perth, on Australia's west coast. These events are funded by sponsors and from sculpture sales. Record sales at Bondi exceed a million Australian dollars. This podcast will be posted on www.sculptcastconversations.com. An image from the show follows:
